What Democratic Free Traders Say on the Subject.

WHAT WHEELING MERCHANTS SAY.

An Intelligencer Reporter Interviews Local Dealers on Local Prices Before and Since the McKinley Tariff Act .-- Men You Know and Who Are Every Day Backing Their Word with Sales Over the Counter Brand the Democratic Free Traders as Falsiflers.

The laborer has been forced to pay more for the roof that sheliers him, for the lat that cover his head and the woolens that cover his back. He has had to pay more for the linen he wears, the hammer and hoe with which he works. Yet his wages have not gone up one cent. What benefit has increased protection been to him?— Extract from Congressmen McMillan's Speech in the House March 9th.

This extract from the speech of a Democratic member of the ways and means committee of the house of representatives the Register keeps standing in big black type at the head of its editorial columns. So far as it goes it correctly represents the Democratic position on the tariff question, which is a position of false pretense. The follow-idg statements from reputable business men of Wheeling show how much truth there is in the allegation.

HOSIERY AND UNDERWEAR.

Mr. Henry Sonneborn, dealer in furnishing goods, was asked the question, How does the price of underwear and furnishing goods compare to-day with the prevailing prices in 1890, previous to the passage of the McKinley bill?

"Well," he said, "everything in my line is cheaper by 10 or 12 per cent. Fine underwear and hosiery is cheaper to-day than it ever was, although right after the McKinley bill went into effect prices were advanced considerably by importers who became frightened, but the result was that exporters on the other side took advantage of the old tariff and flooded the markets. A reaction took place, and in consequence a big reduction followed, which has been maintained up to the present time, and I don't think they will ever advance again to the old prices, for the Ameri-can manufacturers are beginning to realize the fact that they are protected, and have been to manufacture goods and have begun to manufacture goods as fine as any imported, which was not done before the McKinley bill went into effect. I sell now imported socks, three pairs for $1, where formerly I received 50 cents a pair. So with underwear; a man can buy the fine grades for the same price he paid before for the common grades, and judging from the way American manufacturers are striding forward in the production of the finer forward in the production of the finer goods, I shall be able to sell domestic products of as fine a grade as the best imported at less money, to the advantage of both the buyer and myself."

AS TO HATS.

Dinger Bros., hatters, said: "Hats have fallen off from 25 to 33 per cent, on an average, in cloth, soft, stiff and children's hats. Where formerly we received $2 for a hat we now get $1 50, and for a better grade at that. This is due to some extent to improved styles of material. Formerly wool was the favorite hat. This has been superseded by fur stiff hats, which wear better and are more durable. Another change in the manufacture of hats is seen in the fact that prior to the passage of the passage of the McKinley bilt all hat bands had to be imported, with the exception of the very cheapest grades. Now all bands are made in this country for less money. The principal and for a better grade at that. This is try for less money. The principal manufacturing point is located at Danbury, Conn.
"Another singular fact about the hat

Another singular fact about the hat business is, before the bill went into effect there were five special hat im-porters in New York city, and to-day there is only one, and only two import-ers of French crush hats in America. These have also advanced from $1.50 to S3 a dozen. This causes a small reduc tion of profits to the retail dealer, and we refuse to carry many in stock, and the natural result was that this created a greater demand for American-made hats, which are more durable and cheaper." CLOTHING'IS CHEAPER.

D. Gundling & Co., clothing and general furnishing goods, said: "Yes, sir; clothing is cheaper than it was two years ago by 10 to 12 per cent and in some departments even more. Shirts, for instance, that retailed for $2.50 in 1890, now sell for $2, and the cheaper grades in proportion. A good suit of clothes that brought $15 in 1890 now sells for $12, and so the reduction runs through almost the entire line."

George R. Taylor was asked about the effect of the McKinley bill on muslins.

"Muslins have notadvanced, but have been about the same in the last three years, with the exception of slight fluctuations of the market. The McKinley act does not affect muslin, as most muslins are domestic, and very little is imported. Ginghams are cheaper.

George E. Stifel & Co. said: "Muslins? Well, they are, if anything, a shado lower. There is not much change in the price, only the casual fluctuations of the market, and retail buyers are not of the market. "Muslins have not advanced, but have of the market, and retail buyers are not affected by that. Lonsdale muslins have been at the same price for years, but ginghams are slightly cheaper." EFFECT ON HARDWARES

ware firm, when inquired of, said:

"There is no marked change in hardware. Every thing is down to bed rock prices, except in cheap German pocket cutlery, which is now about forced out cutlery, which is now about forced out of the market by the tariff; but that only brings out a better class of American goods at the same price, though there is no comparison in quality.

"Edged tools and hardware are about the same, and about as low as they can get. English cutlery has advanced somewhat, but the American manufacturers make as good articles, and much cheaper, and we handle mostly American cutlery. We find it gives good satisfaction. A great many of the smaller articles in hardware are a shadf cheaper than they were two yerrs ago."

M. Gutman & Co., wholesale and retail clothiers, say there has been no advance whatever in the past two years in clothing, either imported or demestic.

cheaper than it was two years ago. This is especially true of goods where cotton enters into the composition." THE FARMER BENEFITED.

Greer & Laing, wholesale hardware: "No, sir; there has been no advance years. Edge tools are down as low as they can get, and forming the years. Edge tools are down as low as they can get, and farming implements are much cheaper than they were two years ago. The reduction in hoes, scythes, rakes and smaller farming implements is especially noticeable, and on the whole general hardware is cheaper than it over was,"

Said a member of the firm of L. S. Delaplain & Co., wholesale dealers and jobbers in dry goods, when approached by the INTELLIGENCER reporter:

"Our firm, which is one of the oldest in the dry goods business in the country, has never known dry goods to be

try, has never known dry goods to be as low as this year, never in all its ex-istence. Almost ALL DEPARTMENTS SHOW SOME DECREASE in the last two years. Cotton goods that we paid 51 cents for in 1890, now sell for & cents less, and in some cases oven lower. Cotton plaids, a staple goods, were in 1890 sold for 41 cents goods, were in 1800 sold for 44 cents; they are now 44 cents, less 5 per cent discount. Cashmeres—last year we paid 724 cents; this year we buy the same goods for 674 cents. Calicos are deem tower, and staple woolen goods are all on an average 74 per cent lower. Skirts, yarns, underwear and all such articles are lower now than they were two years ago. In fact, the tendency is to a decrease instead of an increase.

"The only increase noticeable is in some now and novel patterns, for which some new and novel patterns, for which there is a big demand, and the manufacturers keep their prices up until this demand wears off, and the goods then naturally seek their level, and others take their place. You may safely say that almost all dry goods are lower now than they over ways in this country. than they ever were in this country's history.'

RIDICULOUS FALSE CLAIMS.

Mr. M. Sonneborn, of the Hub, while he was not in business in Wheeling before the McKinley bill became a law, is an old dealer in clothing, hats and furnishing goods, and in conversation with an INTELLIGENCER man he said the allegation that prices had been in-creased in his trade by the operation of the new tariff act was not only false and without reason, but was ludicrous. Clothing, said he, is cheaper; so are hats; so are nearly all articles that a man wears.

There is another consideration that the far seeing business man has in view. the far seeing business man has in view. The stimulus to certain-lines of manufacture in Whoeling is already making steadier work and that means more money to spend. This answers Mr. Mc-Millan's query as to what benefit increased protection has been to the laborer. Wheeling and Benwood steel workers, Bellaire steel workers, the sheet rollers of the city and vicinity have already done work which they would not have done if the McKinley tariff had not been enacted. Potters and glass workers get a benefit, too, and their increased abilty to purchase means increased are prosperity for the peoments. means increased abilty to purchase means increased prosperity for the peo-ple who sell to them.

cheaper than they were two yerrs ago."

M. Gutman & Co., wholesale and retail clothiors, say there has been no advance whatever in the past two years in clothing, either imported or domestic. The latter is, if any thing, cheaper.

"In the former class, imported worsted goods we are selling just as cheap to-day as we did prior to the passage of the McKinley bill, and we anticipate no advance, though we did expect a rise after the bill went into effect, and laid in a big stock for our jobbing trade. The advance, if there was any, did not affect us, and to-day we can duplicate the imported goods at the same prices that we paid two years ago. As a rule though, clothing is
